But during his stay, the situation worsens as politicians hire a goon named Martin (Kembang Vinod) to track down Maradona and his friend Sudi (Tito Wilson), who picked up a fight with the man's son Aravindan, who lost his memory after the incident. Maradona gets along well with many people in the apartment, like ossepachan, an old man living alone in his opposite apartment. He also befriends Asha (Sharania R Nair), a home nurse in the apartment next door, just before falling in love with her. At the same time, he is informed by Sudhi and another of his friends about the events taking place in their hometown. As the film's intervals end, it shows an incident in which maradona and Sudi are forced to beat the rogue Aravin Dunn. Martin and his gang then find Soudi and beat him badly before locking him in hiding. Maradona saw the story on a news channel where a man was badly beaten by a group of goons and identified it as Soudi. He confesses to Asha about his past as a goon and she leave him. Uspachan calms him down by saying Asha will return to him if she learns about his trueMartin and his gang then arrive at the apartment to look for Maradona, only to find that a robbery had occurred in the apartment where he lived, and also to find out that he had been missing since the day before. Maradona went to Aravindan's house and apologized to his mother because he was behind the man's condition. Maradona surrendered and is now trapped with Sudi. He is happy to see Soudi still alive, as he previously thought Sudi had been killed. Maradona also gets a call from Asha, who is now a nurse at a hospital somewhere. Soudi is now repenting, especially for ruining his wife's life, someone who loves him and married him knows his past. Sudi then succumbs to injury. When Martin and his friends arrive, Maradona overwhelms them to escape. The final scene shows Maradona on a journey to Aravindan and West Bengal (probably where Asha is) who doesn't remember who Maradona is (and he's the one behind his condition).
